I'm one of the few born and raised in South Florida. Although native South Floridians do not have accents, we sure do enjoy the beach, reality television, and of course, plastic surgery (I prefer my position on the other side of the knife). Having attended the University of Miami for undergraduate and medical school, residency, and fellowship, I am a Hurricane lifer (by definition, I bleed orange and green). I enjoy a good college football or basketball game, especially against big rival teams such as the University of Florida or Florida State University.

Typical of South Floridians, I chose a rather unconventional route in seeking out my ultimate passion. I took advantage of a unique opportunity to complete training in Internal Medicine prior to ophthalmology residency and oculoplastics fellowship. During those three years I brazenly donned a Boston Red Sox cap and a New England Patriots jersey. There I learned to think independently and began to truly understand the implications of systemic diseases on various organ systems. When serendipity brought me back home to Miami for ophthalmic training, I was bestowed with the distinct honor of serving as every ophthalmic colleague's curbside internist. Experiences further cultivated my research interests in ophthalmic infectious, inflammatory, and neoplastic processes. While I have been blessed to have hard work and motivation pay off, the loving support of family, friends, and colleagues keeps me riding high on this amazing adventure. They constantly inspire me to strive to be my best. I owe a heartfelt thank you to them all.
